

Failte Ui Ceallaigh

The Ó Ceallaigh Welcome

*"A blessed, long living, great, courteous welcome,
An affectionate, charitable, just, proper,
true hearted welcome,
A welcome and twenty, and I add hundreds to them,
Like the surge of the stream is my welcome to you".*

At Christmas time 1351 William Bui O'Ceallaig - Chief of Ui Maine, issued an invitation to the poets, writers and artists of Ireland to a great feast at Knockcroghery, Co Roscommon. The gathering was known for William Bui's hospitality and generosity.

O'Kelly Country was approx 800,000 acres equal to 1200 Sq miles when the Indenture of Connaught was signed by Aedh Ó Ceallaigh and others in 1585.

It was signed by The O'Kelly, and his son Conor Og, Donogh O' Murry, O' Naghton, Thos Le Strange, Thos Dillon, Francis Shane. The terms and conditions suggest it was not a popular decision. Hugh O' Kelly, Teigh Mc William O' Kelly, Connor O' Kelly and their heirs were obliged to be good subjects. That was the end of the O'Kelly Lordship of Ul Mhaine. He was affectionally known as the White Prince and informally called Hugo. He became a stranger in his own land.
